Core Service Levels

- Much of the department's workload is generated by land use applications (OCP and Zoning bylaw amendments, development permits, variances), subdivision applications, and information requests.
- Policy development and review of bylaws takes place as needed to ensure they remain relevant and enforceable and that new issues are addressed.

Core Service Levels

- Economic development has gone from an ongoing activity to a main focus.
- Answering information requests (are dealt with according to priority).
- Requests for permits are processed as quickly as workloads, municipal bylaws, council policies, and relevant provincial statutes, including the Local Government Act allow.

Core Service Levels

- Major studies, bylaw reviews, and special projects are done according to their priority in the Strategic Plan and as resources allow (e. g. Esquimalt Village Project, Esquimalt Road Urban Design Guidelines, Esquimalt Branding Project, Revitalization Tax Exemption, West Bay Neighbourhood Design Guidelines)

Core Services

- Development approvals: Many redevelopment proposals require a zoning bylaw amendment and/or an amendment to the Official Community Plan. Zoning Bylaw amendments may require the creation of a new zone and/or a text amendment.
- When variances occur a development variance permit is required.

Core Services

- Economic Development:
 - Economic Development Strategy completed (will be updated this year).

Core Services

- Assisting Committees and Commissions
 - Advisory Planning Commission
 - Design Review Committee
 - Heritage Advisory Commission (In hiatus)
 - Environmental Advisory Committee
- Staff provide support to the committees and their activities. Most decisions of committees are based on information contained in staff reports.

Subdivision approvals

- Subdivision approvals are handled by the Subdivision Approving Officer who is the Director of Development Services or the Deputy Subdivision Approving Officer who is the Director of Engineering and Public Works.
- Subdivision application review requires very detailed work and very close coordination with the Engineering Department.
