The applicant's architect gave an overview of the proposed development, noting that the parking included two visitor parking spaces, two commercial parking spaces and sixteen parking spaces available to residents of the building, two of which were fully accessible.

PUBLIC INPUT

Alexandra Innes, resident inquired as to what provisions had been made for washer in every suite, pertaining to the plumbing for wash water.

Gina Sundberg, resident, expressed her excitement and support for the proposed development, and suggested residential parking signs on the adjacent streets.

Emmy Labonté, resident, stated that she liked the design of the proposed building, including the underground parking, and noted that the developer has addressed all concerns raised. She pointed out that this development was well-placed to encourage people “out of their cars”.

Pete Hartman, resident, stated that he was not in support of this development proposal because of the reduction in required parking requirements – from 51 to 18 parking spaces. He added that on-street parking cannot be accommodated for this development.

Maureen Sherlock, resident, stated that she liked the design of the building but was concerned about the parking variance requested. She was not in favour of the variance, noting that it did not address the number of visitors that may attend this building.

Muriel Dunn, resident, noted that some streets have no parking on one side of the street. She expressed her appreciation for the design of the building and the Car Share program.

Janet Jones, resident, stated that she liked the idea of a Car Share program but noted that on-street parking was an ongoing issue in the community.

Loyd Houston, resident, expressed his appreciation for the design and layout of the building. He questioned the “best use” of the property, with the fire hall and police station adjacent. He commended the developer for his plan for transit passes and the Car Share program however when the passes expired, and with visitors, it would be difficult to find parking.

Sandra Dixon, resident, expressed concern for the existing houses on the site and for the people who currently live there.

David Bird, resident, stated that he lived directly behind the subject property and was concerned about the height of the building and its impact on his views.

The Director of Development Services gave a brief overview of the rezoning and Development Permit applications and introduced the applicant who provided an overview of the development proposal and was available to answer questions.

PUBLIC INPUT

Mark Lindholm, resident, stated that his property was directly affected by the proposed development; however generally he was in support of the application. He expressed concern for access to commercial uses and with the number of visitor parking. He supported the “white roof” concept proposed for this strata-titled building because of its lower maintenance issues than a “green roof” concept.

Kathleen Ironmonger, resident, stated that she lived adjacent to the subject property and that the proposed building would affect her views. She was concerned about additional traffic, pedestrian safety and the impact on sightlines of the two towers.

Alexandra Innes, resident, expressed concern about the ongoing construction, and with the proposed breezeway attracting criminal activity.

Lilly Thompson, resident, stated that she was impressed with the project and welcomed the removal of the existing pub and recycling centre. She was concerned about shadowing, increased traffic, the blasting during construction and the proposed height of the buildings.

Chris Daley, resident, expressed concern with the blasting to create the underground parking, shadowing of his building and the density of the proposed development.

Willy MacGillivray, resident, stated that this development proposal was setting a precedent for this area and for amendments to the OCP. He inquired as to the vision for this area, and what the developer was prepared to do for the citizens of Esquimalt in exchange for rezoning approval.

Georgina Hesketh, resident, inquired as to why some developers are able to make 8 or 6-storey buildings economically feasible in other communities.

Emmy Labonté, resident, stated that with a second look at this development proposal, the building resembles a European style, was well thought out and would be an improvement over what is currently on the site.

Muriel Dunn, citizen, stated that the proposal was too grand and questioned why the developer needed to have a 12-storey building. She was opposed to 12-storey buildings in Esquimalt, especially located around a school.

Susan Currie, resident, expressed concern with the density of the 2-tower development, and that the developer may run out of money and the townhouses not being completed on the site.

Peter Ryan, resident, stated that he was in support of this project and welcomed the accessibility features proposed.
